LICENSED APPLICATION END USER LICENSE AGREEMENT

The Product provided through this download is licensed, not sold, to You for use only under the terms of this license. This product is provided free of charge, if you have been charged for this product please contact the creator using the contact information provided inside the EULA file of this product. The following terms and conditions apply to this product.

a. This license granted to You allows for the personal use of this product for use with RPG-X only. This product can not be ported to any other game or software without the written consent of its creator Griffin Endurance.

b. The files contained here in are watermarked to protect the product from unauthorised modification or redistribution under other product names. This pack is to remain intact when distributed and no file of any kind can be extracted from this pack and used independently without the written consent of its creator Griffin Endurance. This includes: Sounds, Textures, Models and any other file included within this pack.

c. This is not a developers tool, and as such, should not be used as one. The files held within this pack are not to be used in independent modifications for RPG-X or any other game software or media without the written consent of its creator Griffin Endurance. If developers of RPG-X would like to use the resources provided in this pack they are free to do so, but must not provide any of the files contained here in. Developers that choose to use resources from this pack must instead provide a link to this pack and list it as a requirement in their EULA and distributable. The only exception of this is covered in d.

d. If a developer would like to create a modification of this modification such as texture changes, model changes or scripting they are permitted to do so freely as long as they don't extract and modify the original files. If they would like to do this they will need to request the written consent from its creator Griffin Endurance.

The term "written consent" is used in this EULA several times and refers to the following:

1. An Email from the same email address as the one provided in the EULA.

2. A Written Letter.

3. Consent provided on a public forum where the account used has an unhidden email address that matches that of the one provided in the EULA and has been verified as the email address holders.

Other Copyright Information

This product is based on the Star Trek franchise which is a registered trademark and copyright to CBS Paramount Pictures. This product is provided for free and does not make money off of the copyrighted name. Note to Developers

"Although this license restricts usage of the assets within this pack I am a strong believer in expanding ones knowledge and capabilities. Rather then using resources from this pack to make your development projects why not ask me how I made them? I have offered tutoring to several newbie developers detailing how I create my works and have even written entire tutorials for single individuals to get them started. I am very passionate about the work that I do, pouring a lot of my own soul and sweat into these art forms. To you this may seem like a simple pack of resources for exploitation but to me it is a form of self expression. Violate it and you violate me. The end product isn't as important as the journey to get to it and the experience gained. Only then can you look at your work and say to yourself "I made that, and I'm a more knowledgeable and greater person for doing so". So please respect the limitations of usage, and contact me with any questions to help you on your way."
